

MARIA'S MUSIC STUDIO

MARIA'S MUSIC STUDIO - Lessons in Piano, Voice, Guitar, and Brass (with the exception of French Horn) Teaching Philosophy Maria's Music Studio's purpose is to give each student a firm foundation in good technique, the theory behind what they play, various performance practices specialized to various time periods, an understanding of how music is put together, along with how to apply these skills to other genres, such as pop, jazz, rock, etc. These are skills which we believe are needed to create a well-rounded musician. In the end, we hope each student gains a life-long appreciation and love for the arts, whether professionally or just for a life-long enjoyment.

Why take private music lessons?

1. Music lessons help children gain a sense of responsibility and independence, along with patience. Learning an instrument takes time and practice to succeed. The role of the teacher and parents is to guide the student to a designated goal. In the end, it is up to the student to gain self-motivation and work hard to reach that specific goal. This skill of perseverance and responsibility can be applied to many other aspects of their lives.
2. Music lessons give children a safe and healthy way to express and explore individuality. Although music can be a group effort, private lessons are geared more towards personal growth and development. Studies have shown children involved in music have a higher self-esteem than those who do not.
3. Learning a musical instrument, forces children to use both sides of the brain instead of relying only on the dominant side. The concept of multi-linear thinking and reasoning helps in the academic arena. Studies have shown state and national test scores are higher by students who play an instrument than those who do not.
